

Co-operative Education at Knowledge

Are you passionate about public television? Knowledge Network is passionate about helping to develop today's students to launch their careers in web development/design, marketing/communications or public broadcasting.

Knowledge Network is where stories live that speak to our time. Through our network of storytellers, we enhance the public educational broadcasting experience for British Columbians across the province.

Our co-operative education program is designed to partner with B.C.'s colleges and universities to provide paid practical work experience and further the training and skills development of students in film, television, internet, marketing, communications and other recognized programs. What better way to enhance your academic learning and guide your career?

We're looking for bright, ambitious students who are passionate about public broadcasting and eager to learn and create.

Interested students are invited to send a letter stating why you are the right person for us, along with a resume to hr@knowledge.ca.
